In Grade 2 my biggest wish was to take apart a floppy disk to figure out how it worked. Around the same time, around eight years old, I had a really old “computer” that hooked up to the TV and let you type in code, what I now know was BASIC, that would flash your name up on the screen. I badly wanted a cassette recorder to be able to save the program I had wrote out.

This curiosity with tech continued, when I was eleven I was downloading Linux distros from school to bring home and try to make a router out of, since we had high speed internet, but no router, and it's a small town, no tech stores. That's when I learned about, and am thankful I don't have to use much these days, `lsmod` and other gritty parts of Linux.

I am not trying to sell you on what I've done, since there has been so much I forget what to even mention until it is needed.

These resume is a horrible one-day Work in Progress, and the career site is more jumbly than I know. Site was started as a “one-pager” resume, but turned into a full website trying to organize and share my surprisingly many areas of expertise. Please accept this resume, with its placeholder/repeated content, as an outline of what I can do.

Also please know that until yesterday, I have not worked with Microsoft Publisher for ~20 years, when I was a teenager. I think it helps show my adaptability though, and quick learning abilities. Checkout <https://career.stevens.pro/> for more.

Please call, I need a project and team to focus my energies on, rather than resume writing :) I write but really say nothing. Most my work is confidential, much under NDAs, and I can't just post about it here, but am able to discuss with you privately.

— All the best, Greg

17+ Agency Years

IT Director at Media Dog Productions Inc. (www.mediadog.ca).

Boutique, Corporate, Largely Public Sector Websites.

Created, maintained, supported, fully managed web hosting service, a nice recurring revenue stream for our agency.

Business-ish Owner

Dalyle DevOps Inc, established October 2021. Business is good but I do not like billing, nor having additional customer support to service my clients, which is why I am seeking full-time employment, or full-time contract opportunities. Been advised that contracting may be only way to see as many tech stacks and make as much impact as possible.

Battle Proven

UX/UI, end-user Focused Eye

7+ Powerlifting Years

Brought me so much, from discipline to team work, community support, and more.

“...really knows his shit.”
